Studying Creative Writing in the UK

There are Creative Writing courses at every level in the UK, from one day workshops through to undergraduate and postgraduate degrees.

83 Higher Education Institutions offer BA degrees in Creative Writing, sometimes in combination with other subjects such as Film, Literature or Language Studies, while others include an element of Creative Writing within English degrees. A similar number offer MA degrees, with almost 200 to choose from. You can study full time for a year, or part time over 2 years, or up to 3 years by distance learning ('low residency'). You can study for an MA in short fiction, the novel, poetry, screenwriting, children's writing, nature writing, life writing, journalism, play writing, teaching creative writing... or any combination of these.

A considerable number of Masters level degree programs have a research element – either practice-led research or critical research – at their core. Since the beginning of the 1990s British universities have also offered creative writers the opportunity to study for a doctoral degree in their subject. Creative Writing research can take many forms, but at its heart are active creative writers, producing creative works as key parts of their research explorations. In addition, such research often considers critical questions concerning Creative Writing practice and the results of this practice; for example, structural or stylistic questions, questions of form and function, or questions of authorship. Equally Creative Writing research might be driven by thematic or subject-based ideas, concerns with cultural conditions, the psychology or emotive context of Creative Writing, or explorations of Creative Writing aesthetics. Some Creative Writing researchers might be interested in the types of knowledge that Creative Writing entails and offers; others may have an interest in the audiences for Creative Writing, its distribution or reception.

Details of all UK writing programs are on the NAWE website at www.nawe.co.uk/writing-in-education/writing-at-university/writing-courses.html. Contact information is also included, and tutors will be happy to discuss with you the various options available.

In 2008 NAWE produced the first specific Benchmark Statement for Creative Writing teaching and research in universities and colleges in the UK. You'll find a copy of that Benchmark on the NAWE website, together with a wealth of supporting information.

Creative Writing at Aberystwyth University

In recent years, Aberystwyth University has established itself as one of the leaders in the expanding field of Creative Writing Studies. In addition to an undergraduate degree in English and Creative Writing, the University offers two postgraduate degrees in the subject: the one-year MA in Creative Writing and the three-year PhD in Creative Writing.

Both are available in either full- or part-time mode. If you already have a first degree (in any subject) and are interested in exploring your potential as a writer within a firmly structured and imaginatively sustaining academic framework, please contact us at the address below for further information.

Facing the sea and surrounded to landward by rolling green hills in one of Britain's most notably unspoiled areas, Aberystwyth provides an inspiring environment for writers. With a 130-year history of academic excellence to its credit, the University blends traditional values with a thoughtfully progressive outlook. The Department of English was rated 'excellent' in the most recent teaching assessment exercise.

Postgraduate study in Creative Writing

The taught MA in Creative Writing will provide you with an advanced understanding of theory, practice and poetics in creative writing. During the course you will take an option in creative innovative writing, fantasy or scriptwriting (for film or tv), with the degree culminating with a substantial creative project.

Our Research Degree in Creative Writing started seven years ago. All Research Degrees are individually supervised by either Keith Jebb, a poet, critic and reviewer, or Lesley Mckenna, a shortlisted fiction writer and poet, are practised-based, and include a contextualising thesis. Most aspects of writing can be accommodated, but there is an emphasis on innovative writing forms and areas of genre fiction (especially horror and dark fantasy).

We also offer BA Honours degrees in Creative Writing, and Creative Writing & Journalism.

Undergraduate courses:

- BA (Hons) Creative Writing
- BA (Hons) Creative Writing & Journalism

CREATIVE WRITING

AT THE UNIVERSITY OF EAST LONDON

Creative Writing at UEL is more than a collection of degree programmes. We offer students fertile ground for experimentation and the possibility to explore tradition or to break out of old forms and restrictions.

Our teaching and research spring from a vision of writing that is culturally diverse, practice-based and multi-disciplinary. From BA Creative & Professional Writing through MA Writing: Imaginative Practice (on campus or by distance learning) to PhD research, UEL provides excellence in creativity, study and professional development.

Our vision is informed by a commitment to diversity and excellence. It has an impact on everything we do, defining and redefining the place of writing within a landscape that is both global and local, placing centre-stage the role of the writer.

Our focus is on new work that expands the writer's personal frontiers and allows the possibility of new, hybrid forms. With an emphasis on producing contemporary writing for publication/performance/production that expresses the cosmopolitan and international flavour of our university, our workshops are varied, interdisciplinary, and challenging.

Subject to Validation

LOUGHBOROUGH UNIVERSITY MA in CREATIVE WRITING

Develop your writing and professional skills in a stimulating and supportive environment.

Taught by a team of writers, academic experts and special guests, this MA in Creative Writing offers you the chance to work in a range of genres and forms. These include techniques in fiction and poetry, such as plotting, adaptation and creative thinking. We cover specific genres such as writing for TV, the weird tale and Sci-Fi. There are also workshops on creative non-fiction forms such as travel writing, biography and verbatim theatre.

“I left as a better writer and I wouldn’t trade that for anything”

Your dissertation will allow you to focus on a subject of your choice, backed by research skills and one-on-one supervision. In addition, you will receive training in a range of skills: how to find an agent, how to run a workshop, where to go for support beyond the University, how to apply for funding... We equip you to be a writer after your MA.

“I am more confident, skilled and realistic...”

We are thriving creative community: you will have an opportunity to take part in workshops, guest readings and open-mic nights. Perform your work to fellow students; learn from seeing other writers read live; get involved in theatre productions. The department has connections with regional organisations such as Writing East Midlands, the Curve Theatre and Word!

We have writers of TV and radio drama, poetry and fiction on the staff. Guests typically include writers for young people, literature professionals and magazine editors. You will be more confident, well-informed and have experience of a wide range of writing. Simply, we aim to help you write more and write better.

Loughborough is one of the UK’s top Universities, and the English and Drama Department is consistently ranked as one of the highest for research – and student satisfaction.

Situated near Plymouth's lively city centre, and adjacent to both Dartmoor National Park and the Cornish Riviera, students attending UCP Marjon's Creative Writing programmes find plenty in their surroundings to inspire.

Creative Writing at UCP Marjon can be studied as a Single Honours subject, or Combined Honours with English Literature.

Academic staff are also practicing, published writers in a range of forms. In addition, the programme hosts a continuing series of Visiting Writers, providing contact with further published writers and those working in writing-related industries.

Field trips are offered during the programme, and include a writers' retreat.

Graduates typically proceed to work within the publishing and performing arts industries; to teaching careers, or to further study of Creative Writing at Masters Level.

The Creative and Professional Writing Programme at the University of Roehampton offers MRes (Master of Research), MA (Master of Arts) and PhD (doctoral) study for writers and students interested in pursuing their practice within a structured and supported framework.

Masters-level students take a core module in Poetics and Critical Writing. This provides a firm theoretical context for all kinds of writing practice, and for practical methods of conducting the specialized forms of research required within the discipline of Creative Writing.

The programme, based in the university's Department of English & Creative Writing, also offers doctoral supervision for PhDs in Creative Writing. Our MRes and MA courses both offer a suitable preparation for applying to work on your writing at PhD level.

Postgraduate students form part of a vibrant Creative Writing community at Roehampton. Tutors are all practicing professionals within their field, and students have access to weekly research seminars, a series of guest lectures on professional practice, many student-run societies and, of course, to the broader cultural life of London.

Whether you are considering an MRes, an MA or a PhD, Creative Writing at Roehampton offers you the choices that will allow you to understand what kind of writer you are.

Develop your voice. MA Creative Writing

Do you want to develop your writing in a supportive and dynamic environment?

Do you want to study on a campus that includes a professional theatre, one of Britain's best contemporary art galleries, and a concert hall regularly hosting world-renowned performers?

The Creative Writing MA at Southampton is a challenging and stimulating programme allowing you to focus on four exciting areas of contemporary writing – writing for young people, international fiction, scriptwriting, and poetics. Our dedicated team of staff will use weekly workshops, seminars, and individual tuition to help you develop your voice. You will have the opportunity to publish and edit an anthology, to take part in a literary festival, and to collaborate with musicians, actors, and visiting writers. Your fellow students will come from all over the world and bring with them a wide range of experiences and writing traditions.

The University of Southampton is home to the Centre for Contemporary Writing, which hosts regular events, readings, and conferences. Recent visitors to the centre include Caroline Bergvall, Lavinia Greenlaw, Lee Harwood, Philip Hoare, and Mirza Waheed. Our own creative writing team includes novelists Aamer Hussein, Alison Fell, and Rebecca Smith, poet Peter Middleton, and playwright Evan Placey. We look forward to working with you.

National Association of Writers in Education

NAWE is the UK network for writers and writing programs, offering publications, resources, events and services for all those teaching or studying creative writing.

NAWE's mission is to further knowledge, understanding and enjoyment of Creative Writing and to support good practice in its teaching at all levels.

NAWE promotes Creative Writing as both a distinct discipline and an essential element in education generally. Our membership includes those working in Higher Education, the many freelance writers working in schools and community contexts, and the teachers and other professionals who work with them.

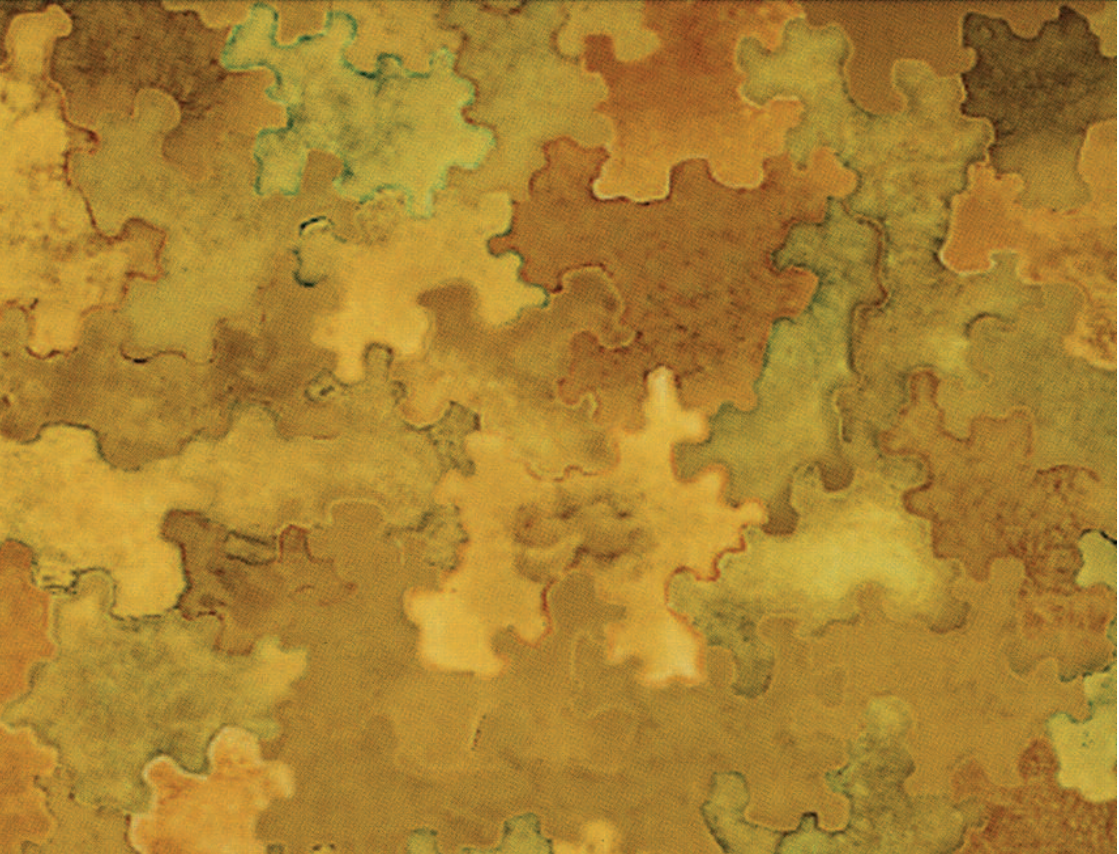

We welcome members from overseas, with the following subscription rates available:

Associate Membership – £20: this rate is open to any writers, teachers, students or other colleagues who wish to be involved and keep fully up to date with our work. It provides reduced rates for all NAWE events and publications, and free access to the NAWE magazine and its archive online. Associate members in the US wishing to purchase printed copies may do so at £30 for a full year (3 issues).

Institutional Membership – £195: this is primarily for universities and writing organizations. It provides full access to resources (including the online magazine) for up to 10 named individuals, together with reduced rates for all events, publications and publicity (such as international promotions), plus one library copy of the printed magazine. Courses and opportunities offered by the institution are given maximum (free) publicity on the NAWE website, and one free advertisement in the magazine. Universities in the US can receive further printed magazines at the rate as above.

Overseas members are very much encouraged to contribute to the NAWE magazine, Writing in Education, and to take part in our Annual Conference in November.

To subscribe to NAWE, please use our online subscription service at www.nawe.co.uk.
